The apartment is just one of 72 properties in the prestigious No. 1 Palace Street development, a 300,000-square-foot island site that once housed the famous Palace Hotel.

Built in 1860, the hotel was once popular with Queen Victoria's visiting guests, including dukes, duchesses and other foreign dignitaries. However, it has now been renovated into multi-million-pound flats.

The apartment is a short walk from Hyde Park and Westminster Abbey. Northacre.

The current development is notable for incorporating five distinctive architectural styles: Italian Renaissance, Beaux-Arts, French Renaissance, Queen Anne, and 21st-century Contemporary.

Thousands of people will line the streets of London from Thursday for a four-day weekend celebrating 70 years since Queen Elizabeth's ascension to the throne.

Celebrations will feature a special Trooping the Colour, which will involve hundreds of soldiers parading down The Mall, past the balcony of Buckingham Palace to Horse Guard's Parade.

Other events for the jubilee include a live music event in Buckingham Palace and an equestrian display of 500 horses and 1,000 performers on the grounds of Windsor Castle.
